

Christina Qi is a Partner at Domeyard LP, a quantitative hedge fund based in Boston. Domeyard leverages computational models to execute trades at ultra low latencies, deploying capital globally across multiple asset classes. Domeyard is backed by various institutional investors and hedge fund veterans. Christina started her career at Goldman Sachs, UBS Securities, Zions Bank, and Lincoln Labs, with experiences in buy-side trading, sell-side trading, derivatives operations, and technology infrastructure. Christina has guest-lectured for Nobel Laureate Robert Merton's "Retirement Finance" class at MIT, as well as Harvard Business School's core finance class "Investment Strategies."

Christina holds a Bachelor of Science degree from MIT. She is a CAIA Charterholder and was granted the 2014 CAIA Foundation Scholarship by PAAMCO and 100 Women in Hedge Funds. She was recently named among Boston Business Journal's "40 Under 40", of business and civic leaders making a major impact in their respective fields. She serves on the 100 Women in Hedge Funds Non-Profit Boards Committee.
